- Abstract*
1. From May to October 1962, the firing of missiles was noted several times at the Douhov training camp. Three times during this period a strong detonation occurred, followed by the whistling of a missile. The firings took place between 0200 and 0500 hours.
  2. In November 1962, [redacted] an important construction site was noted. The site had a strong resemblance to the photographs of the surface-to-surface missile firing ramps in Cuba [redacted]
  3. In February 1963 it was established that the site was located at UR-660642 (elevations 932 and 926 on the attached map). Access to this area is denied to Western observers, and no on-the-spot verification could be made.
